ONTARIO LADIES' COLLEGE.

SOMETHING ABOUT A LEADING CANADIAN EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION.

Only those who have a personal knowledge of Canadian and American Colleges can fully appreciate the present magnificent equipment of the Ontario Ladies' College at Whitby, or the great strides that this institution has been making during the past few years, in providing for the higher education of young women. In solid literary work it is the recognized leader, as it is the only college in Canada sending up students for the first and second year's examinations with honours of Toronto University. The same efficiency characterises the departments of music, fine art, elocution, commercial branches, and domestic economy. One unique feature in the musical department is a large pipe organ in the new concert hall, for the use of organ students.

The main building, modelled after one of the old palatial homes of English aristocracy, supported on the north by Ryerson hall, and on the south by Francis hall, presents a scene of beauty, perhaps unequalled in Canada, and with few equals on the continent. Every home comfort is provided in steam-heating, electric lighting, and modern sanitary plumbing. No wonder that the students of the Ontario Ladies' College are happy and successful, and that leading educators turn their thoughts to this college as the one best fitted to indicate the high-water mark of Canadian attainment. The Rev. Dr. Hare has been principal of the college since its inauguration, in 1874, and will be pleased to give further information relating to its work.—TORONTO MAIL. 37ap

Mr. U. Wilson, M.P., agreed to pay half the cost of laying a granite walk along his property on Bridge St. providing the walk was placed outside the trees. The matter was baulked by the council, who wanted the walk built on the inside of the trees. At the last meeting of the council the matter was amicably arranged, and the walk will be constructed outside the trees.

A matched boxing bout took place here on Thursday between Dewberry Corbett and Wilson Fitzsimmons. The combatants fought four fierce rounds with 6 oz. gloves, at the end of which the affair was declared a draw and the stakes, 50 cents, equally divided among the gladiators. Neither one was hurt but both felt a trifle tired after their exertions.

Mr. E. J. Madden, of Newburgh, has been appointed to the postmastership of the Newburgh post office, rendered vacant by the dismissal of Mr. Douglas Hooper. Mr. Madden is a prominent, energetic and esteemed business man and in his capacity of cheese buyer is widely known throughout the county. That he will fill the position with credit to himself and satisfaction to all concerned goes without saying. The Postmaster-General is to be congratulated on his choice, and under Mr. Madden's management the people of Newburgh are assured of an efficient mail service.

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY.

Threshing is now the order of the day, and the farmers appear well satisfied with the result of their summer's work.

Sherman Fox, Picton, started a short time ago for the Klondike.

Apples are said to be very scarce articles in this county which is something unusual for Prince Edward, but doubtless the shortage is the result of the ravages of the tent caterpillars, last spring. Fruit growers will soon get to understand the value of spraying orchards.

Mr. VanBlaricom had been ailing for the past year, suffering from the effects of a paralytic stroke, but he died very suddenly and unexpectedly as he appeared to have been improving. He was a grandson of a U. E. Loyalist and was born and lived the greater part of his life on the old homestead farm on the high shore, but tiring of farm life he removed to Picton where he has lived for the past thirty-five years. Deceased was held in high esteem both by

ABOUT THE TOILET.

How to Prepare Dainty Dentifrices and Harmless Face Powders.

If you wish to keep your teeth in perfect order, cleanse them thoroughly twice a day with a little pure camphorated chalk, or other harmless preparation. Avoid all face-powders which contain cuttlefishbone or other substances likely to scratch and injure the enamel. Salt is a cheap, safe and effective dentifrice; so, also, is powdered borax. To prevent the appearance of tartar, eat freely of common cress. This will even loosen tartar if eaten two or three times a day, successively for a week. The same effect is produced, though perhaps not in an equal degree, by eating strawberries and

Suffered from Infancy.

THE WAND OF MISERY WAVED OVER MRS. THOS. GREEN.

From Her Childhood She Suffered from Heart Troubles—Doctors Said Nothing Could be Done For Her, and that Her death at Any Moment Would Not Surprise Them.

From the Herald, Stratford.

"Of the making of books there is no end," it has been said, and the same claim might be set up in respect of the making of testimonials in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Wonderful as are some of the statements published in the newspapers as to the cures effected in all parts of the country, fresh evidence proves the half has not been told. Were it not for a false sense of delicacy which a great many people entertain in regard to such matters, the columns of the press would be literally teeming with grateful acknowledgements of benefit derived from and permanent cures effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. It is quite within the mark to say that there is no other medicine offered the public that can at all compare with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and there is not a corner in this wide Dominion in which their virtues have not been proved. A cure which recently came to the knowledge of a representative of the Herald is deserving of being widely known. It is an instance of heart trouble that baffled the skill of a number of physicians, some of whom positively refused to treat the patient on the grounds that it was no use. The subject of affliction referred to is the wife of a highly respected and well-to-do farmer in the township of Logan, near the village of Dublin. Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Green are firm believers in the efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and for very good reasons. Mrs. Green has suffered everything but death from a weak heart, the trouble having afflicted her since early childhood. On several occasions she has been so low that it was not thought possible for her to recover. Her greatest trouble often arose from exhaustion or a sudden start, and at such times her heart seemed to cease its throbbing and the breathing was fitful and labored. Doctor's medicine seemed to have no effect whatever. She was advised by one physician that all that could be done was to keep her strength up, and it was with a view to strengthening her system, and with no hope that her heart would be benefitted that she began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She had not been taking them long, however, when there was unmistakable relief from the trouble that had made her whole life miserable. During the past summer she has used Pink Pills freely, and has enjoyed better health than for many years before, and has been able not only to do her household work, but also many of the out door chores that fall to the lot of a farmer's wife. The different physicians who have treated her have frequently told her husband that they would not be surprised to hear of her death at any moment, but she is to-day a strong woman, enjoying better health than she has done for years. Both Mrs. Green and her husband feel grateful for the great benefit she has received from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and spare no words in recommending their names to everyone who enquires what has wrought such a wonderful change in Mrs. Green's health and spirits.

In cases of paralysis, spinal troubles, locomotor ataxia, sciatica, rheumatism, erysipelas, scrofulous troubles, etc., Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are superior to all other treatment. They are also a specific for the troubles which make the lives of so many women a burden, and speedily restore the rich glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. Men broken down by overwork, worry or excesses, will find in Pink Pills a certain cure. Sold by all dealers, or sent by mail postpaid, at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y. Beware of imitations and substitutes alleged to be "just as good."

What a Touch Does.
A Parisian touch is given the regulation white pique Eton coat and skirt by wearing a white tulle vest and a black gauze scarf, which fastens underneath the jacket on either side of the front, crosses in the waist, and ties behind with long sash ends. The front of the jacket should be cut out in some odd shape to display the vest, and with a stiff white linen collar and a plaid necktie, the effect is stunning.

An Occasional Poke Bonnet.
An occasional poke bonnet, made of colored tulle, wired and shirred into shape, tied demurely under the chin with tulle strings and trimmed with small roses, as seen at the fashionable garden parties; but it is the exceptional face that can resist the effect of suddenly added years which this old-time shape is almost sure to produce.

At the Queen's Garden Party.
Pink and white gowns prevailed at the Queen's garden party, and one very striking dress of pink muslin over white silk was trimmed with cream lace insertion in wavy lines around the skirt, all edged with a little frill of black chiffon. Other pink muslin gowns were trimmed with frills of Valenciennes lace from the hem to the waist.

For Fashionable Gowns.
Black grenadines, in various conventional patterns, made over colored silk are very fashionable gowns this season, and the variety of fancy grenadines has no limit. One novel design is a fine black ground with a scroll design in white silk threads all over it. Other kinds are corded in bright colors.

What Veils Are Like.
Bright dark blue veils are very much worn in Paris, but white cross-hair net with black cheville dots is more generally worn here with the light-colored straw hats. A fine black liltice net powdered with tiny spots, and all the new Russian nets without any spots at all, are equally famed.

moved to a new place. He has lived for the past thirty-five years. Deceased was held in high esteem both by his numerous relatives and his large circle of acquaintances to all of whom he was "Uncle George." His wife and one sister, Mrs. E. A. Benson, survive him. About twenty-five from Belleville attended the funeral, which took place on Sunday morning. Friends were also present from Rochester, Manitoba, Deseronto and Napanee, all wishing to pay a last tribute of respect to the man who had been so kind to them all.

Providence Thanked. It is with pleasure that I recommend B.B.B. for the cure of indigestion and impure blood. I had tried many medicines but received no benefit until, I thank Providence, I was advised to use B.B.B., and it resulted in a perfect cure.

TAMWORTH.

The weather for the last few days has been very cool. Reports say heavy frosts have done some damage to vines, etc. The farmers will nearly finish their harvest this week if the weather keeps fine. Crops are abundant. The root crop looks fine. Potatoes promise an abundant crop again this year, making now four successive years of heavy crops.

Our village is steadily improving although the cry of hard times is everywhere heard.

Mr. S. Shields has finished the veranda in front of his hotel, improving the appearance very much.

Mr. Robt. Caswell has erected a driving shed in connection with his livery, adding greatly to the looks and improvement of his barn.

Floyd & Son have renovated their tailor shop, enlarging it, placing an extra window in the front and one in the rear, making a very desirable tailor shop.

Mr. John Wheeler has placed a new fence around his lawn.

Our village last Tuesday morning had an early wedding from Marlbank. The ceremony was performed at 7.30 a.m. in the Anglican church by Rev. J. R. Serson. In the evening we had another quiet wedding, Mr. Wm. Wages to Miss E. Jones at the parsonage by Rev. Lewis, at 8 o'clock, again on Thursday evening at the manse, Mr. Harvey Paul to Miss Mabel Jones by Rev. Ballantyne. We wish the happy couples every happiness.

Our school was opened last Monday, being delayed one week as it has undergone a thorough repair during vacation making it a first class grounds and school. The ground has been ditched and raised, placing new outbuildings and walks from entrance to them the school has also been overhauled. New floors, new walls inside, new siding outside, new doors, in fact it is in a good state of repair now. A new well has been added, new pump and new fence.

C. G. Coxall has erected a fine steel tower in connection with his store and private residence, giving him an abundant supply of water. The tower is sixty feet high, with a tank of thirty barrels in it, twenty-five feet high, enabling him to place a good stream any place in his store in case of fire by means of fifty feet of rubber hose which is attached, also connecting with his lawn and garden, enabling him to have an abundant supply at all times. The mill is of the latest make having an automatic regulation so as to adjust the fan etc., at any time without any help. It is from the Ontario Wind and Pump Co., of Toronto.

The Rev. J. R. Serson and Mrs. Early left last Tuesday on a short tour, via Niagara Falls and New York. There was no service Sunday in the Anglican church; service as usual next Sunday at 10.30.

We saw Mr. Shyer Kennedy on Monday walking with a cane. He has an abscess on his leg—a very sore thing. We hope he will soon be all right again.

successively for a week. The same effect is produced, though perhaps not in an equal degree, by eating strawberries and raspberries, especially the former. A loaf of common green sage rubbed on the teeth morning and night, cleanses and polishes them beautifully.

A most refreshing antiseptic dentifrice, useful when the teeth are decayed, may be made up from the following recipe: Tincture of quillaia bark, two ounces; pure carbolic acid, thirty drops; pure glycerine, one ounce; oil of wintergreen, ten drops; oil of cinnamon, two drops; essence of eucalypt, twenty drops; water, twelve ounces; mix well together. A teaspoonful of the mixture should be added to half a tumblerful of water to clean the teeth and rinse the mouth.

When the gums are spongy and receding an astringent wash is generally necessary, otherwise the teeth are apt to become loose. Here is a recipe which will be found both pleasant and efficacious: Tincture of orris root, six drachms; lavender water, two drachms; tincture of cinnamon, four drachms; tincture of cinchona bark, four drachms; eau de cologne, two ounces. Add half a tumblerful of water to rinse out the mouth twice a day. Another equally efficacious and pleasant preparation, called vicious mouth-wash, is composed of tincture of orris root, four ounces; essential oil of almonds, one drop; attar of roses, one drop; salicylic acid, four grains; proof spirit, two ounces. It should be used in the same proportions as the preceding recipe.

One of the best and simplest powders for the face is composed of plain corn flour, scented with a little very finely powdered orris root. Pure starch should be lightly dusted over the skin with a swansdown puff, not rubbed into the pores. Face powder should be carefully and regularly removed from the face every night with soap and water, otherwise it is likely to prove injurious by clogging the gland orifices and preventing the perfectly free action of the skin. If your skin is inclined to be rough and coarse in texture, or sallow in appearance, you cannot do better than use a cosmetic made from horseradish. Well scrape and wash some horseradish roots, cut into very thin slices, or scrape as if for horseradish sauce; pour over about half an ounce of the roots a pint of boiling milk, cover it closely and leave to infuse until quite cold. Strain with pressure, and the decoction is fit to use. First wash the face with soft water and good soap, rinse, and dry thoroughly, and then bathe the skin with the horseradish infusion. The process may be repeated two or three times a day.

To Breathe Correctly.
As a matter of fact, not one person in a hundred breathes normally. A little knowledge of physiology and a few hints on the subject, however, will enable anyone to comprehend the precise art of filling and emptying the lungs on scientific principles. The main thing is to be sure that the lower lobes of the lungs are well filled with air and that one breathes from the abdomen. After one has acquired this habit the chief thing is to breathe in as much sunshine as possible, and to believe in the efficiency of oxygen as a remedy for nearly all the ills that flesh is heir to.

The following are some excellent rules for improving the respiration, and bringing it up to a normal condition: Stand at an open window or reedline on a couch with the waist and chest unbuttoned; hold the chest walls high and inhale in slow long breaths; exhale as slowly, three times only at first. Gradually the number of times may be increased and the time lengthened for the breathing exercises. Fifteen minutes, twice a day, at least, should be devoted to this exercise to accomplish the desired results. To inhale long, deep breaths while slowly raising the arms above the head, and to exhale as slowly while lowering them is one of the best breathing exercises ever invented. The practice of breathing very deeply while walking in the open air is recommended not only for the general health, but is one of the best cures for obesity as the increased amount of oxygen greatly augments the consumption of waste material.

SILENCE is golden—dead men tell no tales at the Klondike.

THE Goderich Signal, a Reform journal, is firing hot shot into M. C. Cameron, the Liberal member for west Huron, because he had his son-in-law appointed post master of the circular town. Tory journals are printing the Signal's scathing condemnation of Cameron's conduct with glee. Many prominent Conservatives during the late regime were guilty of nepotism but we have yet to learn of a single instance where a Tory editor had the courage to condemn them.

THE Reformers of the good old County of Lennox and Addington have been fortunate in their choice of candidates for the local house. Both are strong, representative men and acceptable to the rank and file of the party. In Lennox the popular and well-known warden of the county, Mr. Bowen E. Aylsworth, has been placed in the field and we believe he will carry the forces to victory in the next provincial election. Mr. Aylsworth is a successful farmer and one who has had a long and varied experience in municipal affairs. The Government he represents has proved itself to be a clean, economical and efficient one, careful of the interest of the province and anxious to promote the welfare of the people. In Addington a bright, energetic and popular medical man has been selected as standard bearer. In the rear of the county, where he is known, Dr. Coutlee is highly esteemed and respected and his many good qualities of head and heart appreciated. Although he is a comparative stranger in this district we have been given to understand that the doctor intends fraternizing with the Liberals of this vicinity shortly and thus remedy this defect. Dr. Coutlee is a man who has done yeoman service for the reform

Well Mr. Editor as I have not seen anything from Morven in your most valuable paper in some time I will endeavor to collect a few items.

Quarterly service was held in the White church on Sunday morning and was largely attended. Rev. Shorey gave a most excellent sermon.

It is rumored we are to have a new church in our midst soon.

Rev. Clarke, of Belleville, preached in the Brick church on Sunday night as Mr. Shorey held service at the Lutheran.

Mrs. George Robinson sang a very fine solo on Sunday night, also she acted as organist in the absence of Miss Fannell who spent the week at Montreal.

Miss Shorey is at present camping.

Mr. Geo. Dracup and sister Hattie of Fairview and Mr. John Dinkley of Picton were guests of Miss Sharpe on Sunday.

Mr. B. Perry is still quite ill, also Mr. M. F. Vanslyck is on the sick list. We hope for their speedy recovery.

Geo. Robinson and family spent one day last week at Selby.

Mr. Dunn Vallean took a trip to Niagara last week.

DENBIGH.

For last week.

The recent rains have seriously interfered with the farmers work around here. A number have a large quantity of hay out yet, while their harvest grain is ready to be taken in.

H. E. Gage is in our midst again after spending the holidays with friends outside and resumes his position as school teacher. Welcome back Herb.

Mrs. Wm. Lane and daughter, Miss Tillie M. returned home after spending a week visiting friends and relatives at Cloyne.

Dr. Finney who has been rusticiating for some weeks in the country left for Bancroft and Belleville on Saturday last.

Miss Ada W. Lane spent Tuesday with her sister Mrs. W. Holmes, Vennachar.

Mr. Fred Chas'son who has been ill for some time is able to be out again.

Mrs. No-man Craunshaw is visiting friends at Plevna.

Mr. Fred Loyat returned after spending a week at Mountain Grove.

Algeria H. Lane sold his valuable black mare "Lady Jane," to J. Johnston and purchased another.

DEATH LARGELY DUE TO HABIT.

A Scientist Explains How Thought May Determine Human Existence.

Dr. C. A. Stephens, a New England man, a graduate of the Boston University Medical School and a member of many learned bodies, built a laboratory several years ago at Norway Lake, near Norway, Me., and he spends almost all his time there in investigating the causes of old age and death, with the object of their alleviation and removal. Dr. Stephens published from his laboratory the close connection of all the evils in the brain by nerve fibre, sending them to feel and act together about a year and a half before the discovery was announced by the great Spanish physiologist, Ramon y Cajal of Madrid.

Dr. Stephens says he is confident that the progress of brain science will enable mankind successfully to overcome decay and its climax, death. He points out that matter is indestructible and that the law of the universe is immortality. He believes that death at threescore and ten or thereabouts is largely a matter of belief and habit. "Generation after generation is born into the world, expecting to die at a certain time, and it dies then. He very forcibly points out that if children were brought up with the idea of living forever this altered expectation would gradually but surely extend the life limit in the course of generations.

To prove that life length is largely a child of habit and environment he instances the elephant and the swan, whose ages run into the centuries, as compared with infusoria and mites, whose heyday of existence is but the fleeting moment. His studies have been particularly directed toward the microscopic examination of the brain cells of the old and infirm. He finds their nuclei dark and shrunken, just like the brain cells of the fatigued player and of the old man, so graphically illustrated by Dr. Hodge, of Clark University, Worcester, Mass.

Dr. Stephens raises the serious enquiry as to whether the universal presence of microscopic "dirt" may not be a potent factor of old age and decay. He has found large quantities of foreign inorganic matter in old brain cells. He shows how this "dirt" is brought into the system by the inspired air (micrococci), through the cells of the lungs into the blood, and finds its final refuge in the cells themselves, where it increases in amount hourly, and escapes the metabolism constantly occurring in

"PRINCESS OF THE KAFFIRS."

The Child Who Will Inherit the Great Wealth of Barney Barnato.

Barney Barnato left a little "Princess of the Kaffirs" to inherit his great wealth. If the noted financier and promoter was worth all the money he was said to have been worth, this little lady will come into one of the biggest private fortunes in the world. Barney left another and an elder child, if Mrs. W. W. Blackman of Cleveland is right in her claim, for she says that she, too, is the daughter of the diamond king of Africa. Mrs. Blackman's mother has gone to England to protest Barnato's will. The mother is a Russian, and she says that Barnato married her in Russia twenty-seven years ago. The Kaffir King was known at that time as Barney Brolo-jitschy, and he disappeared in a most mysterious manner many years ago. Mrs. Blackman says that, although she was very young when her father disappeared, she remembers him very well and really recognizes him from his latest photographs. Her mother is now at work with her lawyers in England, making arrangements to go into court and protest the will, in which Barnato left the bulk of his hundreds of millions to his widow and his little daughter. The case promises a big fight.

Women as They Pass

In Bosnia, which is under Austrian rule, it has become necessary to provide women physicians for the Mohammedan women, who are not allowed to see a male doctor. The first one to be appointed is Dr. Theodora Kravewska, a Pole by birth. Her appointment comes under the head of army surgeons, therefore she is compelled to wear a uniform. Her rank is equal to that of a captain in the army, and she draws the same salary as an officer of that rank. She is obliged to travel through the entire district to look after sanitary conditions, and to insist upon compliance with the sanitary laws on the part of the population.

Invitations to a "bloomer lawn party" from a church society of women in St. Louis recently stirred up great excitement and criticism, but the demand for tickets was tremendous. One of the conditions of the invitations was that all the women should wear bloomers, and those who were not properly equipped in that respect were to be provided with the articles on their arrival. When the crowd arrived on the night of the bloomer party it discovered all the women adorned with immense sunflowers, which were the bloomers which had invited so much criticism.

Miss Lell Seque, superintendent of the city schools of Decatur, Ind., refused to swear to the assessor's list, or to give him a list of her taxable property. For this she was arrested and fined $18. She believes that if she cannot vote she should not pay taxes.

Miss Ethel Murray, a young woman of Detroit, Mich., swam a mile and a

THE NEWBURGH POST OFFICE.

In noticing the dismissal of Mr.
Douglas Hooper from the postmaster-ship of the Newburgh post office the Beaver insinuates that he was removed because of his political leanings, thereby endeavoring to score a point against the Government. Our contemporary would make it appear that there were no charges or complaints against Mr. Hooper's administration of the office. Of late years a great deal of dissatisfaction was felt at the way in which the office was conducted and in consequence of the numerous complaints made, the inspector felt called upon to investigate the matter.
He found that the office was not run in compliance with the postal requirements and Mr. Hooper was informed that he would have to make certain changes in the management. He neglected to comply with the regulations and now finds himself minus the position. The charges against Mr.
Hooper were not of political partisanship and the complaints against his management were not confined to Reformers. The inspector who conducted the investigation was of the same political stripe as the late postmaster and he found that it was time for a change. Personally we have not a word to say against the dismissed official and would not have alluded to the matter had not the Beaver in its eagerness to score the Government endeavored to convey an impression not borne out by the facts. The following letter, which has been forwarded to the Beaver for insertion in this week's issue, is from a prominent citizen of Newburgh and throws additional light on the subject:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "NAPANEE BEAVER".

Dear Sir,—I notice in your issue of last week, that Mr. Douglas Hooper has been dismissed from the postmastership of Newburgh, for political partisanship without any charges being made against him.
You certainly must have been misinformed for while the writer has every respect for Mr. Hooper, it must be known that there were charges made against his manner of running the Newburgh post office (not charges that he was a partisan.) These charges were investigated by the inspector, which investigation was noted in your paper and on the report of the inspector, who certainly cannot be charged with favoring the reformers. Mr. Hooper was required to make certain changes in the management of the office. The order he ignored and consequently was dismissed. I would remark that we are all sorry for Mr. Hooper, but his best friends long ago advised him to resign or run the office as ordered. But he saw fit to take the advice of a few hot heads that were sure to get any man in trouble and the consequence is he is no longer postmaster, and now the discomfiture falls on his ill-advisers who certainly make more of a cry about it than Mr.
Hooper himself.

Knowing that you have no desire to misrepresent even the Reform party in your paper I ask you to publish this letter in justice to the business men here, who finding the post office management was to the detriment of the business interests of the village took the only course open to them to have it remedied where kindly advice failed. I am your obedient servant,

One of Newburgh's Business Men.

deep in the cells themselves, where it increases in amount hourly, and escapes the metabolism constantly occurring in the minute tissues, the rejuvenation of organic material, and the constant birth of fresh physiological structures.

The vastly superior power of brain cells to resist decay suggests to Dr.
Stephens the invincibility of thought life in its final victory over death's decay.
This very suggestive experimental test refers to the mental change which habit induces soon after each individual has reached the "prime of life." Up to that point there is energy and hope in all the fissures. After that point all the histological structures of the body lose heart, and make no effort to stem the tide which sets for "the downward path to death."

The doctor declares that the achievement of modern special education, which enables the deaf to hear with their eyes, and tones up relaxed vocal chords, which enables it to pass that the blind see with their fingers, taken in connection with the great longevity of ancient races, as described in the Old Testament, and as authenticated in monuments, shows that unusual length of life has been a fair accomplishment of history, and suggests that the determination of life length is possibly and practically within the domain of thought.

As humanity in its physiological expression is wholly a compromise with perfection, Dr. Stephens argues, better food selection and a more watchful outlook against the introduction of foreign and inorganic material into the system cannot help increasing the life potential of each unit of the race.

Dr. Stephens holds that what is known as "soul" is merely cell experience, the knowledge acquired by cells, collectively and individually, during years of hereditary transmission. This view is the same held by Sir William Thomson and Thomas A. Edison. He points out that father and child, death and life, generation after generation, are not the ideals of human society, but only its makeshifts.
Immortal life is the real aim in view, and he believes it will be achieved in time.

The Lubrication Test.

Very few of the millions of people who carry watches realize to what a wonderful extent lubrication is developed, and what an extraordinary number of turns the balance wheel makes with one oiling. A Chestnut street watchmaker, whose knowledge of these wonderful pieces of mechanism is not exceeded by any man in this city, has made up an interesting table of comparison to show the perfection of lubrication in a watch.

A watch will run on one oiling from a year to a year and a half. Every minute the balance wheel turns on its axis 450 times and 27,000 times in an hour. Accepting a year as the time the ordinary watch will run with one oiling, he finds that if the driver of a locomotive was as well oiled as a balance wheel of a watch it ought to run sixty miles an hour day and night for 648 days, or well on to two years, with one oiling. In that time it would traverse a distance equal to nearly forty times the circumference of the earth.

In view of the fact that in reality few locomotives will run one day without re-oiling, he maintains that the watchmaker has developed his art to a far greater degree than the locomotive builder has yet been able to reach.

Two Perfect Colors Found
Only in Diamond Dyes

Perfection in color or shade is sure to captivate the hearts of the ladies, who are always unerring judges.

The lovely pink produced by the Diamond Dye is a discovery that has gladdened the hearts of thousands. This Diamond Dye Fast Pink for Wool is clear, pure, brilliant and fast as a rock. One package gives a magnificent shade of pink on two pounds of goods—silk or wool; a medium shade on three pounds; or a light and delicate shade on four pounds.

Attention is also called to the Diamond Dye Fast Light Blue for Wool. This is a dye that gives a color far surpassing the light blues produced by European dyes.

Ladies having soiled white or cream dresses made from cashmere, nun's cloth or serge can have them dyed in rich shades of Pink or Light Blue and fitted for evening wear. This making of new dresses out of soiled, faded and cast-off garments means a great saving in dollars to thousands of families in Canada.

Mrs. Florence Maybrick.

The British Government has again Je-londed to interfere with the sentence of Mrs. Florence Maybrick, on the ground that there is no reason for a change of judgment on the matter. The last effort to secure at least an amelioration in the conditions of her confinement was made by Ambassador Hay, who had some correspondence on the subject with the Foreign Office, which he has transmitted to the State Department. Lord Salisbury appears to have called for a that he was unable, in view of the conclusion which has been reached by himself and by his predecessor as to Mrs.

Maybrick's guilt, to recommend her to Her Majesty that any exceptional treatment should be accorded to her. The secretary also added that the medical report in Mrs. Maybrick's case was quite satisfactory, an evidence that the Gov-statements as to the insanity of the pris-

Colors to Wear With Red Hair.

If the women with red hair would only study how to use it becomingly they would on the ground of the distinction of having it instead of being disappointed with their lot. There appears to be an impression among women with red hair that almost any shade of blue can be worn by them, because, as a usual thing they have fair and delicate complexions, but, as a matter of fact, blue is the one color above all others that they ought to avoid. The contrast is too violent and the combination is not harmonious. The shades most suitable to be worn with red hair are bright, sunny brown and all autumn leaf tints. After these may be selected pale or very dark green, but never a bright green, pale yellow, and black unmixed with any other color. Mixed colors are not becoming to red-haired people, as they nearly always give them a more or less dowdy appearance. In fact, red hair is usually so brilliant and decided that it must be met on its own ground, and no vague, undecided sort of thing should be worn with it.

MRS. CLARENCE J. BERRY IN HER YUKON WINTER COSTUME.

The Strange Honeymoon of These Two Young People—How Their Bravery and Pluck Won Them a Fortune—A Story of the Mines.

Clarence J. Berry.

HE BARRATO of Klondyke, by name Clarence J. Barry, is now one of the most talked of men in California. Berry is supposed to have brought out more gold than any other one man and is said to own more mining property than any one in the district. Berry is a modest-appearing young man of about 30 years of age and lived most of his life in the San Joaquin Valley, California, and until he went up to the Yukon in February, 1896, had never known very much of the good things of this world.

But Mr. Berry is a gentleman of some business ability, as he has proven, and expects to be a millionaire before he is very much older. And Mr. Berry does not take all the credit of having made more than $100,000 in less than a year, but modestly says that the responsibility for his good fortune may be attributed to his wife more than to himself. There is indeed a strange story. Not many young people would choose a trip to the wild and unexplored regions of Alaska for a honeymoon journey. Yet this is what these two did. In Fresno County in February, 1896, Mr. Berry married Miss Ethel Bush, the daughter of a well-known resident of the little town of Selma, and immediately they started for the goldfields of Alaska.

However sanguine their dreams of new found wealth may have been, they have been more than realized. From

ALL HE CARED FOR.

St. Peter stood at the pearly gate, And gazed down the narrow way Up which tolled the souls of those whom fate Had numbered to die that day.

And marvelled he much that among the throng Was one who was blithe and gay, And merrily trundled a wheel along Up the straight and narrow way;

Nor did he appear to be burdened by O'er much with his load of sin, For, doffing his cap to St. Peter, he Proceeded to enter in.

But Peter cried: Not so fast, my friend, Your sins have been too great. I'm sorry to say your journey's end Is not at the pearly gate.

The merry wheelman knew not dismay, But answered, "Good Saint, 'tis well—I'd be much obliged if you'd kindly say How the roads are that lead to hell."

"Now, stay," cried St. Peter, "and tell me, I pray, How is it you seem not to care Whither you go or where you stay, And not for your soul's welfare?"

"Oh, as for me, it matters not," The wheelman quickly replied, "If the place be cold or it be hot, So long as I can ride."

BIG ENGLISH STRIKE.

ALL KINDS OF INDUSTRIES STOOD STILL FOR SIX WEEKS.

Reminiscences of an Old-Time Labor Man Recalled Which Are Interesting—How Sympathy With the Strikers Was Made Sure and Certain.

Thomas Grundy, the well-known labor leader of this city, was a participant in some of the famous strikes which occurred in England forty or more years ago, and his recollections of the manner in which they were conducted and his comments upon the good which they accomplished are interesting just now, when strikes and rumors of strikes are engaging the attention of nearly everybody. Mr. Grundy is now upward of 60 years of age, and has been a hard worker in the labor movement nearly all his life. He drew his first inspiration from a mob of striking weavers who, when Mr. Grundy was seven years old, called at the schoolhouse where he was beginning his education and compelled the teacher to give the scholars a vacation. This was a unique form of enforced sympathy strike, which Mr. Grundy has never since seen duplicated. He had sometimes wondered which he has since witnessed compared with what he saw in his boyhood's days, but as he remembers his feeling on the great occasion it was simply one of satisfaction that the strikers should relieve him of the necessity of going to school.

According to Mr. Grundy's description of this strike it must have been one of the greatest labor struggles that ever occurred. In 1842 the condition of the cotton workers in Lancashire, Yorkshire and Cheshire had become so bad, owing to the introduction of machinery, that a general strike movement was brought about without any organization and at first without leadership.

In its spontaneous character it seems to have much resembled the present miner's strike now on in half a dozen states, though Mr. Grundy insists that the miners have possessed great advantages for the inauguration of a general strike compared with what the weavers had on that occasion, as the latter were absolutely without any organization whatever. During the six weeks' industry of every kind was entirely suspended in the district affected, it being estimated that in the neighborhood of 3,000,000 people were idle. This included the weavers themselves and persons of every other occupation whom they obliged to leave work. The small tradesmen and manufacturers were obliged to close their places, the teachers in the schools had to send their pupils home, and the strikers even prevented the passing of vehicles upon the highways by massing themselves in compact bodies through which no horse could be driven.

Mr. Grundy having been very young at the time this strike occurred, most of his information about it has been gathered from reading. The incidents which he remembers are principally the Paine's Celery Compound Conquers After Years of Failures With Other Medicines.

Mrs. G. H. Parker, of Winona, Ont., was for eighteen years a complete martyr to neuralgia, that cruel and merciless tormentor of thousands of old and young in Canada. During her long years of agony she had the services of some of the best medical men, and consumed any quantity of patent medicines, but all failed to drive off the tyrant that was making life a burden. At last she was persuaded to test the power and virtue of Paine's Celery Compound, and the happy results that rewarded her faith are described in the following letter.

"I have been a great sufferer from neuralgia for nearly eighteen years; these sufferings at times were so bad that words would fail to describe them. After having tried every known remedy and different physicians, and receiving no help, I was persuaded to try your Paine's Celery Compound, which I have been using for the past four months. I am happy to say that I am now a different woman and completely cured. I can recommend your Paine's Celery Compound to all my friends, for it has been worth hundreds of dollars to me."

Curious Facts About the Toad.

The toad lives ten to forty years, does not begin to produce young until the fourth year, but then lays over 1000 eggs a year. It has lived two years without food, but cannot live long under water. It never takes dead or motionless food. It takes its food by means of its tongue alone, and it operates this so rapidly that the eye cannot follow its motions. It captures and devours bees, wasps, yellow jackets, ants, beetles, crickets, weevils, caterpillars, moths, etc. The stomach that doesn't flinch at yellow jackets, wasps, blister beetles, and click-beetles or pinch bugs would seem to be prepared for anything in the insect line, and it doubtless is. In twenty-four hours the toad consumes enough food to fill its stomach four times. A single toad will in three months devour over 10,000 insects. If every ten of these would have done one cent damage the toad has saved $10. Evidently the toad is a valuable friend to the farmer, gardener and fruit grower, and can be made especially useful in the greenhouse, garden and berry patch.—Galveston News.

How They Came to New York.

The following conversation took place between two gentlemen in a crowded notwithstanding a walk of 700 miles over vast ice fields and great mountains is one to try the courage of strong men. But Mrs. Berry never faltered, and not only reached Forty-Mile safely, but went to keeping house for her husband as soon as they arrived. At this place they did not meet with much success, and when the news came that George Cormack, or Carmike, as some of the men from Klondyke spell it, had struck gold on Bonanza Creek, Mr. Berry, without a moment's hesitation, started for the new discovery, taking all the provisions he could carry in a little boat which he purchased.

He was not destined, however, to reach the new district ahead of his wife, for soon after he started Mrs. Berry came to the conclusion she did not like life alone at Forty-Mile, and, woman like, acting upon the impulse, she packed all their household goods and took the first steamer in the direction her husband had gone. She overtook him and they proceeded to the diggings together. Arriving there, they met a young man named J. O. Clements, and Mr. Berry provided Clements and a man named Antoine with a grubstake. In a short time all three had made their fortunes.

Berry furnished several men with grubstakes and each on his return, and it is said that he brought down $130,000 to San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Berry evidently intend to make up for their long period of enforced privation, for packages addressed to the fair bride from local homes dealing in ladies' wear kept arriving at their hotel all yesterday afternoon and last evening, says The San Francisco Call. Mr. Berry says the exact amount he brought down is only a small amount of his wealth, and he would be a rich man if he never returned to Alaska, which he intends doing in the spring. It is not likely, however, that his wife will accompany him, as the incentive to acquire wealth has now been removed.

"Delightful weather, isn't it?" remarked the Colonel, noticing that everyone in the crowd was gasping for air. "A little too warm, perhaps, for entire comfort; still it isn't a marker to the heat we had here in the summer of '02, well, four or five years ago. Do you remember that hot spell?"

Nobody did. Everybody groaned and the Colonel went on. "Sprinkling wagons were useless; the water was converted into steam before it struck the pavement. All the boulevards had to be repaved—the asphalt melted and ran into the sewers—and the elevator men made big fortunes selling parched corn."

"How hot was it?" asked one of the sufferers.
"Nobody knows," replied the old man; "there wasn't a thermometer in town which would register more than 240 degrees in the shade."—Chicago Times-Herald.

"I didn't steal her," the young man replied. "She went willingly, and there isn't a court on earth that will not agree with me."

"You lie!" the trembling old gentleman cried. "You know you lie! You got her out onto that tandem bicycle of yours and carried her away. Speak! Is it not so?"

"It is true," the other replied, "that we went away on a tandem; but that fact only proves that I could not possibly have taken her against her will. Have you ever been on a tandem?"

"No!" screamed the stricken father. "never!"

"Then that accounts for your ignorance in the present case. Didn't you know that a woman generally sits in front, and picks out the course to be pursued?"

With a heart-breaking groan the white-haired old man sank down, crying.

"Alas! 'tis true! I hadn't thought of that. What'll you have?"—Cleveland Leader.

Wanted Her Money's Worth.

Anyone who had not seen the woman with an angry eye wobble just before she dismounted from her wheel would have taken her for an experienced rider, a heroine of century runs. She strode with majestic confidence through the store, and so impressed another woman that she forgot herself and let the newcomer be waited on first.

"I suppose," she said to the clerk, that I looked rather new at bicycling, and that you thought that there wasn't much use bothering about me, because I wouldn't know the difference, anyhow." The clerk assured her to the contrary, and said he was sure there was some misunderstanding.

"There was a misunderstanding," she answered. "I understood when I got this repair kit that I was getting all that a repair kit ought to contain."

"Certainly," he answered. "Isn't it all right?"

"Didn't you expressly state that it contained everything that would be required for repairs in an ordinary accident?"

"Yes."

"And I bought it with that implied guarantee, didn't I?"

"Undoubtedly, you did."

"And if things didn't turn out just as you represented them it's your business to make good the deficiency?"

"I suppose so."

"All right. There's your repair kit. You can either put in a paper of pins and some sticking plaster, or else give me back my money."—Washington Star.

"Modern improvements?" returned the boy, inquiringly.

"Yes," answered the captive sucker, as he flopped himself over to a more shady retreat on the grassy bank, "who'd ever thought, for instance, that telegraphy would be used in fishing?"

"Telegraphy in fishing?" echoed the boy, in a dazed sort of way; "what are you talking about, anyway? Your lift into this climate must have rattled you a little. What's this sort of thing got to do with telegraphy in fishing, I'd like to know?"

"Why," responded the funny logician, as he lazily fanned himself with his gills, "how would I have known that you wanted me if you hadn't wired me?"—Richmond Dispatch.

MISS ANNA CHAPMAN.

gathered from reading. The incidents which he remembers are that the friends of his teacher tried to dissuade school and the obliging of his father to suspend business. Mr. Grundy's father was a hatter, having a shop of his own and employing a few hands in the town of Ashton, near Manchester. The strikers came in a large body, and it was only necessary for one of them to say: "Pat out that fire, Grundy," and the hatter immediately suspended all work in his little place and sent his men home to wait for the strike to be over.

Mr. Grundy remembers seeing bodies of the strikers marching along the highways thickly massed together and filling the roads from side to side as far as they could be seen. They were always armed with clubs, and when marching would line up close together, each grasping the club of the man on either side of him, and so weaving themselves into a solid mass. In this way it was rendered impossible for anything or anybody to occupy the road but the strikers, and their object of forcing a general suspension of business in the district was obtained. This was only for a little while, however, as large bodies of the troops of the empire were ordered into the district held by the strikers, and soon obliged them to observe the peace and desist from interfering with the affairs of those who desired to carry on business.

Mr. Grundy's recollection of the matter is that much sympathy was displayed for the strikers by the troops, and that the latter were of very little use so far as breaking the strike of the weavers was concerned. The strike was lost, however, the weavers going back to their work at the end of six weeks without having obtained any increase of wages or any shortening of their hours of labor. It was not long, however, until Parliament, as a result of this strike, began to pay some attention to the condition of the weavers, and laws which served very effectively to ameliorate their condition were passed.

Golden, Bright and other great English statesmen took up their cause, and investigations and discussions resulted, the good effects of which are still felt. The repeal of the corn laws, by which English workmen were enabled to obtain cheaper food, Mr. Grundy thinks, was largely due to this strike, though it had been advocated before the strike took place. Another law which was of great benefit forbade women and children under eighteen years of age to be employed in the cotton mills longer than ten hours a day. This law was not only a good thing in itself, but it caused the workers generally to think and agitate for a general ten-hour day, and some ten years after the great strike of 1842 there was a general strike for ten hours, which resulted successfully.

Mr. Grundy was employed in a cotton mill himself at the time this last strike took place. The workmen simply quit when they had worked ten hours one day, and so inaugurated a movement which was successful. Mr. Grundy says that at that time there was so little general education that many persons could not tell the time of day by a clock, and so in passing around the wheel for the inauguration of the strike, everybody was instructed to stop work when the clock pointed straight up and down, thus being a method of securing a more general understanding than to say 6 o'clock in the evening.

In the mill where Mr. Grundy worked the clock was watched all afternoon, and when the time came there was a general rush for the outside of the mill. The foreman had the gates locked and proceeded to harangue the workmen, but it was to no purpose. Several were notified that they were discharged, but this produced no effect upon them or the others. Mr. Grundy thinks that among ignorant workmen, that is, among those who are ignorant in the matter of education obtained from books, there has been as a rule more loyalty to each other displayed than by those who are fairly well educated. At any rate they stuck together upon this occasion, and won their strike so thoroughly that there was never afterward a general return to the old practice of working twelve or fifteen hours a day. In the mill where Mr. Grundy was employed, too, the manager, after the ten-hour system had been in force for some time, called the workmen together and expressed his satisfaction with it, saying that the results obtained were much more satisfactory from the standpoint of the proprietors than under the old way.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Shortness of Breath. "Since last year I have had serious heart trouble caused by malaria. Shortness of breath, smothering spells on retiring, violent palpitation, etc., often made me gasp for breath. On procuring Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I found to my surprise and delight that they gave me almost instant relief. I got healthy, restful sleep, my heart troubles disappeared, and I now feel very well and strong indeed." Mr. Hugh Moore, Ingersoll, Ont., makes this statement for

How They Came to New York.
The following conversation took place between two gentlemen in a crowded New York clubroom. They had been talking about the condition of things when they first came East. Mr. Rawson said:
"When I first came to New York I had only a ragged coat, with a knife and a few marbles in my pocket."
"You were better off than I, then, for I had neither a coat nor a waistcoat, nor a knife, nor even marbles."
"Nonsense!" was the reply. "How could that be?"
"Well, I will tell you. When I came here I was a baby in long clothes."
The roar of laughter that arose could have been heard miles away.—Tid-Bits.

Just Why He Wanted a Pass.

The general passenger agent of one of the Chicago trunk lines received a letter from a Kansas man the other day requesting a pass for himself to Chicago and return. There was a thing about the letter to indicate that the writer had any claim to the courtesy he requested, but the railway man thought that perhaps the Kansan had some connection with the road, possibly as a local freight agent. So he wrote back:

"Please state explicitly on what account you request transportation."

By return mail came this reply:

"I've got to go to Chicago's new way, and I don't want to walk."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Much Alike.

"It makes me think so much of Christmas," she said the morning of the First of July.

"Of Christmas?" he roared, as he mopped the perspiration from his face.

"Of course," she answered, sweetly.

"Well, if you can tell me any way in which the First of July resembles Christmas," he returned, "I'll just about buy you that new hat that you have been asking for."

"They are the only two days in the year when we don't have any trouble getting the children up in the morning," she replied.

She gets the hat, but he isn't through kicking himself yet.

Good Pay.

"Of course you'll give me one little kiss before I go," he pleaded.

She looked at him intently for a minute and sighed.

"It's pretty high pay," she replied, "but if you will go early enough I suppose I'll have to call it a bargain."

He gave his entire attention for nearly five minutes to the consideration and interpretation of this answer, and then left in a hurry and without making any attempt to collect.—Chicago Post.

He Could Dodge.

"There's nothing slow about Jones," he said, reflectively.

The other laughed scornfully.

"I guess you never loaned him any money," he said.

"Oh, yes," he replied, "I've loaned him $10 six months ago, and I haven't been able to catch him since."

Hurt His Pride.

Mrs. Snidelle—Georgy, you came right into the house this minute, and don't let me catch you out again this evening.

Georgy—You hadn't oughter to be so hard on me before folks in that way, ma; folks 'll think I'm a liar, ma.—Boston Transcript.

STORIES OF YOUNG CANADA.

Some Good Though Unconscious Wit by the Little 'Uns.

A little boy who had a cousin living but three blocks from his home was given permission to stop and play there after school whenever he chose. The tempter soon whispered in Harry's ear that he might go anywhere under the pretense of having been at his cousin's home.

One evening after his mother had heard of her truant boy's wanderings she asked him where he had been since school closed.

"Down to Cousin Alfred's house," he replied.

Then she kindly said: "Harry, mamma knows you have not been there; now can't tell a lie, just tell the truth and all will be well. He replied: "How did you find out?" "Oh, a little bird told mamma." After which he pointed his finger with a little gesture of warning and said: "Don't talk to me about lying, birds can't talk."

A little five-year-old boy when told by his mother that they would go to see his baby cousin christened on the following Sunday, replied with a troubled countenance that "He hoped the rector would go home as soon as he was through with cousin." When asked why he said: "Well, I've had enough. I've had the needles—and such awful pains in my stomach. So I don't want to be christened."

The other day a little boy was heard relating to his chums his first experience in purchasing a pair of shoes. He said the salesman told him positively that the shoes would wear a long time and they had only worn two weeks. He declared he was going to have the salesman sue for "breach of promise."

A prominent oculist relates the following story which recently occurred in his practice, showing the natural brightness of some little children: The patient, a little boy 5 years of age, had some slight inflammation of the eye, and upon being interrogated as to the nature of the trouble replied: "Well, I don't know just how to call it, but I don't get any light out of the eye."

THE FARM HAND'S SOLILOQUY.
Some folks sigh to be far away
Upon lofty mountain tops;
Others would loiter around where they Might watch the waving crops;
Some would sail on the dark blue sea
And think it was earthly bliss,
But under the pump is the place for me
On such a day as this!

SHE COULD NOT DISMOUNT.

But That Was No Reason Why John Should Have Said So.

"The stupidity and madness of some people passes my comprehension," snappily declared the girl who was the last of all her set to learn bicycle riding.

"Had another tumble?" inquired the girl who loves a joke, with a merry twinkle in her down-dropped eyes.

"Yesterday," continued the story-teller, without noticing the interruption, "I took my wheel and rode over to see Helen Starr. It's three miles to her house, as you know, and I was pretty tired when I got there, so I was sorry to see her brother John standing out from the stoop in front of the house. I—I can't always dismount gracefully, you know, and I didn't like to pretend my skirt was caught and ask him to help me off, for fear—well—for fear he'd think I couldn't dismount alone. So I decided to try it, and then, just as I got right in front of him, those blessed handle-bars turned and I ran into the curb and fell off in the mud."

"I was just as mad as could be, of course, but he was perfectly lovely. Helped me up beautifully, took my wheel into the house and fixed those horrid bars, although he would persist in saying that they didn't seem loose, the idiot! And when I came away again he insisted upon holding the wheel while I mounted by the house."

"You can ride right to the gate and out to the street," he kept saying, the stupid imbecile, and that's what I tried to do. But, oh, my dear! If you knew what I really did do!

"They have a wire fence bordering their grass, you know—just three wires strung along on top of each other—and instead of going through the gate I—I ran into that. The wheel leaned up against the fence peacefully, and wasn't hurt a bit, and I—I went over it. I thought I should die with shame."

"But I got up immediately, of course, and began to rail at those handle-bars for turning again, and then that lunatic of a John Starr actually insisted that they were all right, but that I made too short a turn, and he wouldn't rest until he proved it, not only to Helen, but to her father and mother and a host of visitors, who came trooping up just in time to see it. I tell you, girls, the unutterable stupidity of some people inspires me with positive awe!"

The Merry Jester.

"You shouldn't ride alone so far," he said, tenderly. "You should always have somebody to go with you and guard you."

"Haven't I my mud guard?" she cried snippantly, as she hopped into her saddle.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"They had a telephone at the farm house where I went to this summer."

"What did they use it for?"

"They telephoned to town every day for fruits, butter and fresh eggs."

"All men ought to stand by the miners."

"For what reason?"

"Look at the coal we husbands have handled for no wages at all."—Chicago Record.

"I'm not so big a fool as I look, don'tcher know," remarked young Mr. Willie Boy to Miss Point Breeze.

"Is it possible?" replied that young lady incredulously.—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

The one candidate for the Aldermanship devoted his time to announcing that he would be a shield to ward off every blow at the interests of the people.

And the other candidate, while the first gentleman was warding off the blows, devoted himself to blowing off the ward.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Victim of Circumstances.

She was speaking of her cousin Arthur, but as she finished, the pretty head, which had borne itself so defiantly, went down on my lap, and the burst of tears which followed disproved the truth of her assertion.

No one could have seen the two together and not acknowledge their fitness for each other. Although but cousins a second time removed, a faint likeness was perceptible, but Arthur's mouth indicated greater firmness, and the will which was so necessary in the encounter between the two. He was the only one who did not give up to Miss Emily, who sometimes thwarted her, but always so gently, so tenderly, yet so firmly, that "Don't, Miss Emily, dear, don't!" I urgently pleaded with the willful young beauty who has so impetuously been relieving her mind to certain matters resting somewhat heavily thereon. I was only housekeeper at the Hall, but from long and faithful service, and the fact that the girl who had just thrown herself in such careless grace at my feet had lost her mother when almost too young to remember her, I felt more privileged than perhaps my position otherwise would explain. Not a child of my very own could be nearer my heart than was the spoiled, lovely little mistress of Carlton Grange. The squire was too busy with his chase, his hounds and horses to spare much time to the treasure which in reality lay nearest his heart. To give her her own way, to see her always beautifully dressed at the head of his table, to view with proud eye the slight, graceful figure perched fearlessly upon some favorite horse, to allow no one to cross her from her infancy—here he considered the duties of a father ended, and certainly, so far as begetting a most ardent love between the two, it worked admirably, though, as to the real good of my lady, I am by no means sure.

"And why not?" she questioned in answer to my protest. "I don't love him I—I hate him."

VAGABONDAGE.

Bliss is gained by patience,
So the sages say;
Gentle hermits tell us
June is on her way.

I'll be here to greet her
When she comes in state,
Haven't learned "to labor";
Only just "to wait."

Waiting for the song birds,
Swinging in the trees;
Waiting for the butterflies;
Waiting for the bees.

I've no fear of troubles,
Such as haunt the great;
Haven't learned "to labor";
Only just "to wait."

who had ridden off a few brief hours before so full of hope and happiness. And then, in borken words, she told the story. How, at a sudden turn in the road, she had caught sight of Mr. Arthur following her, and in very perverseness of spirit touched lightly with her whip the animal which needed restraint rather than urging, then turned her head in direction of the pits, a road at any time dangerous, but now, maddened by the touch of the whip, the mare had taken the bit between her teeth, and the little hands clenching the reins were powerless. Mr. Arthur saw her peril, and putting spurs to his horse in reckless defiance of harm to himself, had put him to the leap, endeavoring by leaving the road, to head her off and seize her rein. It was a race for life. A heap of stones lay upon the road. On one side there was barely room for a horse to pass. Could he reach that first, he might save her. There was no time to question. By an effort almost superhuman, he directed his horse to the pass, and seized the bridle which now lay powerless in her grasp. The mare swerved back, his own horse plunged, and, in some way, how, she could not tell, he lay beneath the maddened animal's feet, his head striking on the cruel stones. The shock had brought the mare to reason, which now stood still and trembling. But Arthur had saved her life by giving his.

True Enough.

They lay back in true patrician fashion in the luxuriously cushioned brougham, and gazed upon the passing throng with a perfectly lackadaisical expression.

Suddenly Mrs. Yungcoot excitedly grasped the slender wrist of her companion. "See!" she cried between her pearl-white teeth. "There goes the man who has caused me countless hours of misery and unhappiness. I grow sick at heart at the very sight of him."

"Why, my darling, Gwendolyn," ejaculated Mrs. Teltale eagerly, and scarcely feeling the pain of her jeweled bracelet sinking into the soft flesh under her companion's excited pressure. "And I had always thought that you loved only for your husband and your home. Here, smell my salts; they will do you good. Now tell me all about it. Where did you meet him? And how did it come about? I must confess he is a handsome fellow. One could hardly blame you for falling in love with him. And so strong and powerful looking, too. Who is he? It's strange that I should never have seen him before."

"Why, what perfect nonsense you are talking," cried Mrs. Yungcoot. "Men in love with him? Nonsense! He is my dentist."

...but always so gently, so tenderly, yet so firmly, that I think herein lay the very secret of his charm. There was no regular engagement between them, but it was an understanding for all that, although half the young gentlemen in the county were contestants for the prize, but, save a little harmless coquetry, she gave them no encouragement.

I could but smile as I stroked her pretty golden-brown hair, while yet her head lay in my lap, at the very April shower which was all of grief my darling had ever known, for, ere I had quite finished my few words of comfort, applied I scarcely knew to what, she had once more sprung to her feet, and in a few moments I could hear her sweet voice carolling through the halls. Then under my window, I heard the imperative order to the groom: "Saddle Bess, Tom, and bring her round at once."

"She's hardly fit to ride, miss, this afternoon," the man respectfully answered. "She's skittish at the best of times, and she's been so long unused that I'm most afraid she'd prove too much for you."

"All the better," was the reckless answer. "Bring her round at once."

Glancing from my window as the voices reached my ear, I saw Mr. Arthur sauntering up the walk. He quickened his step a little as he overheard the discussion, saying, very quietly, as he approached:

"Surely, Emily, you will not be so rash as to mount Bess to-day? You must not think of such a thing."

The girl turned haughtily toward him, surveying him a moment in silence; then, as though remarks were unnecessary, turned again to the groom:

"Do as you are bid, Tom. I will now dress."

"Emily, for my sake!" I heard him say in a low tone, but the contest of the morning in which her will had been forced to bend, made her determined now.

"You are detaining me, Mr. Trafford," she answered. "I shall have barely time for my ride."

"You must not, Emily; indeed you must not. My uncle would not wish it, and in his absence I must prevent it."

The color flushed like a crimson rose into the girl's cheek.

"How dare you!" she exclaimed, stamping her little foot. "How dare you speak to me? If you have ever considered yours the right it is cancelled from this moment. Heaven help the woman you would make your wife! She would be your slave. Give her my warmest sympathies, Mr. Trafford; I cannot offer my congratulations."

The young man's face flushed hotly, and he shrank from the words as from a blow, but he had no time to answer, for Miss Emily had already flown past him into the house, and he saw him turn and walk slowly to the stables.

In a few seconds more the groom brought the prancing animal, holding firmly to the bit while Miss Emily sprang lightly into the saddle. She seemed such a very feather to manage the spirited horse, yet I could not help the thrill of pride as I watched the tiny hands bring her into such quick subjection, and the straight, lithe young figure sitting her seat so much perfectly.

The groom stood watching her anxiously down the avenue, but I was not surprised when she had once disappeared from view to see Mr. Arthur leap into the saddle and follow her unseen, he had determined to keep her in sight, and I somehow felt safer to know she was in his charge. Cruel as had been her words, I could not help her too well to heed them at the moment.

Afternoon slowly passed away. What was it that caused such a shadow of dread to creep over my heart? Somehow I could not shake it off. From time to time I would steal away from my other duties into my darling's room, where everything so reminded me of her, picking up the articles she had thrown round in her careless haste, and when all was in order, looking for something else to do to detain me in the spot. Yet I would not acknowledge the real extent and reason of my uneasiness, even to myself, until the sound of horses' hoofs rapidly nearing the house suddenly lifted the load I had unconsciously been carrying and brought me with almost a cry of thanksgiving to the window. Yes, there was my darling's blue habit fluttering in the breeze. She had returned unhurt, but the excitement must have been too great for her strength, for, even from where I stood, I could but note the deathly pallor of her face, and hastened down to meet her.

Ere I reached her side I saw two of the men, in obedience to some hastily issued commands, spring into their saddles and ride rapidly down the avenue. Then in another moment Miss Emily lay almost fainting in my arms.

"Oh, Nanna," she exclaimed. "I have killed him, and he will never, never know how dearly I loved him."

It was some time before she could escape her half-parted lips, and I could but contrast her with the bright, willful girl

...but always so gently, so tenderly, yet so firmly, that I think herein lay the very secret of his charm. There was no regular engagement between them, but it was an understanding for all that, although half the young gentlemen in the county were contestants for the prize, but, save a little harmless coquetry, she gave them no encouragement.

The physicians gave us little hope at first, however, and it was pitiful to watch Miss Emily steal in and out of the room where he lay so white and still and suffering. All her old willfulness had come now, and I could see how her heart was centred in him, but at last we knew the best and the worst. "Life would be spared, but Mr. Arthur would be a cripple for life."

"Through me, Nanna—all through me," she moaned forth when she heard it. "How he must hate even to look at me!" But I had watched his gaze follow her too often not to know differently.

I was busy one day in his room (I think they scarcely knew I was there) when Arthur called for his side.

"I want to say something to you," Emily, he began, "something which has been a long time on my mind. You must not reproach yourself for this. You must not let it interfere some day with giving your love to a man more worthy of it, and you must remember no one will rejoice more than I in your happiness."

For a moment she stood still, cheek flushing and paling; then she threw herself at his feet. "Oh, Arthur," she exclaimed, "will you not take me? I have you learned so to hate me that all the old love has gone?"

"Gone," he answered, stroking the bright hair. "Emily, give a man part with that which has become part of his soul? But, my darling, I cannot consent to your tying your young, joyous life to mine."

"Arthur! Husband!" she whispered, softly; then I stole from the room, knowing my presence would not be missed, and sure my darling would win her cause. Nor do I think, in the many happy years which since then have rolled along, leaving me an old woman now, either has ever regretted that for once and the last time Miss Emily had her willful way.—N.Y. Ledger.

Herding Sheep Good for Consumptives.

Another class of men who watch sheep are those who do it for their health. Dozens of men claim to have been cured of consumption simply by putting in several months at watching sheep. The work gives what is most required in the deadly disease—plenty of fresh air, moderate exercise, and employment that is not wearing on the brain, but is still enough to keep it occupied and prevent nervousness. Of course if a man has plenty of money, he can get these things without herding sheep, but there are many men who need them badly who have no money, and all who have taken advantage of this knowledge have surely been benefited. A number of men who have taken up sheep herding have become so fascinated with it that they have stuck to it long after they have got over the trouble.—Providence Journal.

Elevator Sickness

Physicians have discovered a new and distinctly modern ailment which they call elevator sickness. It is asserted by reputable medical men that the large increase in the number of brain fever and nervous disorders is due in no insignificant degree to the extension of the elevator system. Most people feel sick when going down in a rapidly moving "lift," and the constant repetition of this seemingly slight dizziness induces chronic headache or other nerve disorder and even leads to brain fever in some instances. Those who habitually ride up and down six or eight stories two or three times a day almost inevitably become a prey to some kind of nervous trouble.

Shelling (rogn Pen)

The chef of a New York hotel has found a new way of shelling peas. He uses an ordinary clothes-wringer. The pods, as they go between the rollers, burst open, leaving the peas behind. The first impression is that the peas would be broken or bruised, but it is said this is not the case. The pods stain the rollers, therefore an old wringer should be used.

BOB WHITE.

Harvest's coming and one hears
O'er the wheat field's ripening ears,
Swarving on their fragile spears:
From a bird throat, clear and light:
"Bob White! Bob White!"

Grateful waves of faint perfumes;
Here are rosy cockle blooms,
Blue-grass poodles, soft plumes,
Dew-bespangled, charming sight,
"Bob White! Bob White!"

Low the hawk, marauding, sails;
Frightened, slip the sleek, young quails
Through the stake-and-rider rails.
Again a call, that cheery pipe:
"Bob White! Wheat ripe?"

Blood-red in the bronze-trunked trees
Cherries, good marillas these,
Ideal cherries, if you please,
Answering tling of Bob White:
"Not quite! Not quite!"

In the orchard apples green,
Color of the leaves are seen,
Here a prize, a windfall found,
Red-straked apple on the ground,
Calling, answering: "Bob White!
Wheat ripe?" "Not quite!"

A Medical Warning.

All medical men of large experience have frequently met with cases in which patients have placed a bottle of medicine in their lips and taken a draught of its contents in a dark room, under the impression that there was "only one bottle upon that shelf," when, in reality some other member of the family had placed other bottles there. In this way serious cases of poisoning have occurred. In other cases a wife rising in the night to give some medicine to her husband or child has picked up the wrong bottle in the dim light, and administered a fatal dose, with terrible result.

Where medicine is ordered in drops you should always obtain a medicine dropper from a drug store, and avoid attempting to drop the medicine from the bottle, as it requires a very steady hand and accurate counting to avoid mistake. Finally, let me warn you against one common habit, which is closely connected with the use of bottles containing old medicines, and is strongly condemned by oculists, who most frequently meet with it—the habit of preserving old medicine droppers which have been used for dropping fluids into the eye. Quite frequently powerful medicines dry in these droppers, and when they are used some months afterwards for the introduction of eye washes they produce symptoms which very seriously alarm the patient, and which may to some extent mystify the practitioner.—The Chautauquan for July.

MARY'S LITTLE LAMB.

THE TRUE STORY OF THE HISTORICAL LITTLE ANIMAL.

A Massachusetts Tale That Is Unique In Its Way, Though It May Easily Have a Counterpart Any Day, Barring the Verses.

In the pretty little Massachusetts town of Sterling, or as it was called by the Indians, Woonoschauxet, which at one time formed a part of old Lancaster, in the county of Worcester, Mary E. Sawyer was born on the 22nd of March, 1806.

Her ancestors, the Sawyers, the Prescotts and the Houghtons, were among the first settlers in the town and from this stock many eminent men have descended, among them being the historian, Prescott. Her father, a son of an officer in the Revolution, was a hard working, matter-of-fact farmer, who was not ed for his dislike of Tories, while her mother was a gentle and loving woman of the old New England type. The old homestead in which Mary was born was built by Thomas Sawyer, and was a one storey and a half wooden building that set back a little from the main road. In front, just across this thoroughfare, was the well with its old-fashioned sweep, while at the left on the other side of a cross road stood the barn to which had been built a good-sized shed, and extending from this shed was the sheep pen.

The red stone schoolhouse which Mary and her brother and sisters, as well as the other children in the district, attended, was situated on the other side of the road leading from Sterling to the parent town of Lancaster, on Red Stone hill, distanced about a quarter of a mile from the Sawyer farm. The teacher of this school at the time of the lamb adventure was Miss Polly Kimball, mother of Mr. Loring, proprietor of the well-known Loring circulating library of Boston.

The famous verses entitled "Mary Had a Little Lamb," was told by the heroine of the story as follows:

"The lamb episode occurred in the village of Sterling, near Worcester. I was always very fond of animals, and from the time I could toddle out to the barn, I was with the dumb animals, not a little of the time. One cold, bleak, March morning I went out with father, and after the cows had been fed we went to the sheep pen, and found two lambs which had been born in the night. One of them had been forsaken by its mother, and through neglect was about dead from cold and for want of food. I saw it had a little life and wanted to take it into the house, but father said no; it was almost dead anyway and at the best could live but a short time. But I couldn't bear to see the poor little thing suffer, and I teased until I got it into the house, and then I worked upon mother's sympathies. It could not at first swallow, and the catnip tea I had mother make for my very sick friend it could not take for a long time. I got the lamb warm the first thing, which was done by wrapping her in an old garment and holding her in my arms beside the fire-side. All day long I nursed the lamb, and at night it could swallow just a little. But I wasn't satisfied it would live and I set up all night with it, fearing it wouldn't be warm enough unless there was some one there to look after its comfort. In the morning, to my girlish delight, it could stand; then it improved rapidly, soon learned to drink milk, and from the time it could walk about it would follow me anywhere if I only called it. We romped the fields together and were, in fact, companions and fast friends.

"The fleece of the lamb was of the most and whitest, and I would comb it every day and tie the wool with bright ribbons and dress it up in parasollets and a shawl. The day the lamb went to school I hadn't seen her previous to starting off, and not wanting to go with-out getting her, I called. She readily recognized my voice and soon I heard a faint bleating way down the field. More and more distinctly I could hear it, and I knew my pet was coming to meet me. My brother, Nathaniel, said: 'Let's take the lamb to school with us.' I thought it would be a good idea, and I consented, and she followed along right and gets drunk. Few men realize what it is that makes a woman cross, fretful, and nervous. If they did, they could see to it that their wives took proper care of the health of the organs, distinctly feminine, and resorted to the proper remedy to make them strong and healthy in a womanly way.

The best medicine for nervous, fretful, irritable women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It goes to and corrects the cause. It acts directly on the feminine organism and restores it to natural health and vigor. It soothes inflammation and corrects all weakening drains. It will make a sick woman well, and a fretful, cross woman happy and amiable. It prepares a woman for the duties of motherhood, and taken during the expectant period makes baby's coming easy and almost painless. Women who wish to know more about this great remedy should write to its discoverer, Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. S. J. Bartlett (Teacher), of Granger, Sweetwater Co., Wyo., writes: "Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a boon and a great help to all females. My wife has used your medicine. Prior to taking it, she was constantly troubled with female weakness and monthly, and frequently irregular flow, that incapacitated her for the labors incident to raising a large family. She is now well."

Whoever would find a conclusive answer to the problem: "How to be well" should send to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for a copy of Doctor Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. This book is all that its title implies. It uses no technical terms. Its 1,008 pages of graphic explanation and carefully correct illustrations make it a treasure for anyone to hold. Its 90 pages especially relating to women are worth many times its original price, which was $1.50. There is now ready a large edition to be given away. Send 31 one-cent stamps, to pay for customs and mailing only, and you will receive the book in paper covers absolutely FREE. You may have it in cloth covers for 50 stamps.

After her school days were over, Miss

MRS. MARY E. TYLER.

Sawyer taught school in Fitchburg, Mass., and later became matron of the McLean Asylum in Somerville, where she made many friends, and entered upon a sphere of great usefulness. One lady speaks of her thus: "Her skill in housewifery told of the olden days, and her gentle touch with the sick or the disordered mind made her truly an angel in the house."

Here she met Mr. Columbus Tyler, the honored steward of the institution, and they were married in 1837, in the parlour of the old homestead at Sterling. During her sojourn in the asylum, a period of some thirty-five years, she interested herself in many outside affairs and was one of the women who were instrumental in raising funds to complete Bunker Hill Monument, and she was very active in the Sanitary Fair held for the soldiers in the civil war. She and her husband were among the first founders of the Unitarian Church in Somerville. Having no children of her own, she was always interested in the young, and was seldom, if ever, when in their own home, without some young person with her, and she allowed the neighbors' little ones to ramble at will through her beautiful house and grounds. In reference to children she said to the writer: "If one wishes to keep young in spirit they must associate with the young, and be interested in them." This fact was exemplified by the loving care with which she superintended the infant class in the Sunday school, till

A Belleville newsboy found his way unobserved into the gallery of the hall in which the Grand Lodge of the I.O.O.F. were conferring the grand lodge degree. Big-man-from-up-the-creek scared the boy out of a week's growth and when he got through with him the little chap couldn't even remember his own name. As there were no axes in the hall they decided to let the boy live. His explanation is as follows:—"Fellow told me that a man with a trick coat was givin' a show. I went to the door and didn't see nobody takin' tickets, so I walked up into the gallery." He went out on the run.

Scott's Wha Hae.

The children, grand children and great-grand-children of the late Wm. Scott held their annual picnic on the "old playground" on the farm of Mr. Sidney Scott, Newburgh Road, on Friday, Aug. 20th. This is the old Scott homestead and the gathering must have brought to the minds of the older ones many pleasant and sad reminiscences of by-gone days. The following is a list of those in attendance:—Mearl Sills and wife, H. J. Abbott and wife, Miss Lielly Abbott, Miss Annie Abbott, C. Wilson, Oshawa; Mrs. Ezra Hoffman and Master Herbert, Miss Rosa Jackson, Miss Rhoda Jackson, Miss Maud Loucks, Master Blake Scott, Master Roy Scott, Miss Mary Wilson, Miss Maud Scott, Master Robert Scott, E. W. Scott and wife, Miss Florence Scott, Master Harry Scott, Master George Scott, Miss Belle Davis, Miss Addie Scott, Miss Otta Sills, Miss Nellie Sills, Miss Margaret Abbott, Miss Catharine Abbott, Miss Maud Scott, F. S. Scott and wife, Master Harry Scott and Miss Myrtle Scott, Campbellford; J. M. Smith, Ibra Sills and wife, Elias Smith and wife, Miss Leora Smith, Master Fred Smith, Mrs. Norman Scott, S. E. Scott and wife, Marsh Davis and wife, Frank Wilson and wife, Mrs. Dorland Jackson, Milton Jackson and wife, Irvine Parks and wife, Rev. David Wilson, A. G. Scott and wife, Miss Edith Scott.

This was the day on which Matthew Scott celebrated his birthday. Football, baseball, quoits target shooting, and other games were indulged in, and it is said of the venerable Rev. David Wilson that he kicked the ball almost as good as any of them. The picnic plot of the Scott family is on historic ground, it being near the site of the old camp ground of fifty years ago. It is needless to add that there was edibles in abundance at the picnic nor that Sidney Scott was kept busy for a time freezing ice cream. It was truly a unique and pleasant gathering and we hope that everyone present may long be spared to attend these reunions.

DEAR SIR:

On the 25th of Jan'y last the trustees of the Huron Public School, having doubts as to the economy in using your coal in their building, put in one ton of Scranton coal, and weighed up one ton of your coal. We have two furnaces exactly alike, both having the same number of rooms to heat. Your coal was to be used in the furnace that heated the North rooms. I give you the result, number of pounds burned each day, &c.

Killed at the Crossing.

John Arnold, a young man in the employ of Mr. John Hambly, North Fredericksburgh, was instantly killed at Mooney's crossing on the G. T. R., on Saturday night last. He and the fourteen year old son of the late Fred Fitzmartin were returning from Napanee. It is presumed that when they reached the crossing they waited for a west bound freight to pass, but did not observe that an east bound freight was also approaching. After the west bound train had passed they drove across the track and their rig was struck by the east bound train. Both the occupants were pitched headlong from the buggy and Mr. Arnold landed in the culvert. His skull was crushed in and death must have been instantaneous. Young Fitzmartin was seriously injured about the head. He has so far recovered as to be able to be out and around. He remembers nothing of the occurrence and the shock has affected his brain, if it has not destroyed his reason. Strange to say the horse escaped uninjured, although the buggy was completely demolished. The animal was discovered grazing by the wayside by the son of Mr. Harvey Vankoughnet, of Napanee, who was returning home. He recognized the animal as belonging to Mr. Hambly and notified Mr. Hambly as he was passing the house. Mr. Hambly investigated and found the remains of the unfortunate young man and had them conveyed to Paul & Ming's undertaking establishment. The remains were taken to his father's residence, near Roblin, and interred on Monday. Deceased was about 22 years of age and a quiet, steady, industrious young man. He was highly esteemed by his employer, and respected by all his acquaintances.

The Addington Liberal Convention.

The Addington Liberal Convention held at Sharbot Lake on the 18th inst., was an enthusiastic and well attended meeting. Delegates were present from all parts of the riding and the spirit exhibited by the Reformers is a happy augury that Addington will be redeemed to Liberalism when the opportunity presents itself.

The meeting was called for the purpose of selecting a candidate to contest the riding in the provincial election. The discussion and balloting brought forward the names of a number of prominent Liberals anyone of whom would have made a worthy representative. The names of Mr. H. M. Deroche, Q. C., and Dr. Jno. Vrooman, were mentioned in this connection, but the former could not see his way clear to accept the nomination if tendered to him, and the latter was unavoidably absent from the convention. Messrs. Edward Perry and M. B. Mills were also mentioned as candidates. Dr. Coutlee, a prominent citizen of Addington, and a rising young medical man, was tendered the nomination, and accepted it.

Dr. Coutlee is a man of pleasing presence, good address, and energy, and we feel confident he will carry the banner of liberalism to victory in the next provincial contest in Addington.

After the nomination stirring addresses were delivered by Messrs. H. M. Deroche, Q. C., Dr. Coutlee, Edward Perry, M. B. Mills, and G. W. Dawson, Liberal Organizer, and others. Resolutions of confidence in the Governments of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Hon. A. S. Hardy were passed after which the meeting disbanded with three cheers for Dr. Coutlee and the Queen.

I am asked all kinds of questions every day about coal, particularly this that bears the attractive name of the People's Coal. It was not my intention to advertise this article for the parties selling it by referring to it in any way because as a rule to decry an article of this kind only makes people more anxious to try it, but so much is being said that is so far from the truth that I feel that in justice to myself as a coal merchant, selling the best variety of coal imported into Canada, I should to some extent defend my trade, by stating some facts in the matter. The first I knew of what is now called "The People's Coal" was in the year 1895. Previous to that it had been sold for steam purposes only and when it proved a failure for that purpose it was offered as a domestic coal and went by the name of Royal Stock. The agent of the company, Mr. Jas. McCleannan, tried hard to sell me some of it, offering it to me at 75c. per ton less than I could buy Scranton for at that time. He admitted it was not as good as Scranton but claimed it was worth within 75c. per ton of it, although I think he knew better. But I declined to have anything to do with it. The following season, 1896, it was on the market again, but owing to its not having given satisfaction the previous season the name was changed to Bernice and under this name some new business was secured and as the change of name did not improve the quality of the coal another new name, as I must admit, a more attractive one, was selected for 1897, viz: The People's Coal. There is no doubt but what it will be some people's coal but I think there will be some other peoples instead of theirs. Now Mr. Vanluven publishes a comparison and of course goes the whole hog by testing it with what he hears everyone say is the best coal in the world viz, "The Scranton Coal" and as would be expected Scranton is not in it. As usual his testimonials are from some one a long way off and we all know the price of such varies from a glass of whiskey to a quart flask, so are not hard to get. Now I should like to make a list nearer home and as winter is drawing near, when the poor of our town could appreciate anybody's coal, I will invite Mr. Vanluven, or the gentlemen who own the mine, which produces the coal he sells, to test their coal with "Old Scranton" and if it proves to be equal to it, I will donate five tons to the deserving poor, and if it does not they are to give the same quantity, though I think they should make their testimonials in order to give the poor the same value as they would have in five tons of Scranton. If my challenge is accepted of course the poor will burn People's Coal in which case they can rest assured they have a winter's job and if it is only shovelling coal and carrying ashes they are better at that than being idle. In conclusion I wish to add a few testimonials to the one already given by Mr. Vanluven. I am not positive whether it was during the season of 1895 or 96 I met Mr. McCleannan and he said he was on his way to Tweed, and had shipped a car or two of coal there for the N. T. & Q. Ry. to try and he was going out himself to ride from there to Kingston in the engine to see the coal was thoroughly tested" and an employee of the railway told me after that although Mr. McCleannan was off the engine at every station picking chips and stripping cedar bark off the fences he could not keep up steam and they had to abandon the use of his coal.

I had also heard that Messrs. Folger Bros., of Kingston had tried it on their steam boats and as I knew that they had previously burned Scranton, I called on them a few days ago to enquire if they had tried to use the People's Coal on their boats, when they assured me they had and that it had proved a failure. They said they could use it on short runs by pulling out their fires, cleaning out the dues and building a fresh fire for the return trip but they could do nothing with it on long trips on account of it making so many ashes and choking the drafts. I met Mr. McCleannan on another occasion last summer when he told me he was going to move to Peterborough and his son was going to open a yard there and sell people's coal, and from the way he puffed his goods I thought he would roast all Peterborough with it. From the testimonials I received from there he appeared to have roasted a good few. The following is a copy of a letter received from my Bro. Fred.

Peterboro, Aug. 21st, 1897.
Dear Bro. Chas.—Yours of 20th to hand

Come and admire the flowers and listen to the Band in the Curling Rink on Friday afternoon and evening, Sept. 3rd. Admission 10c.

to see many of those who tried it as I am leaving for Toronto on this afternoon train but I will be back on Saturday next when I will send you another list. I did not see personally but I am told your old friend Mr. Clurton put in ten tons of it last fall and he said it was one half gone when he should not have burned more than three tons of good coal and that he had the balance taken out. Gough Bros., dry goods merchants tried a ton of it. They said they started their furnace and filled it with that coal and went out for a few hours and when they returned it had burned out and the house was as cold as a barn. My neighbor used it but did not like it. He used one ton more coal than I did and had a pile of ashes three times as large. Mr. S. Ray, "Tobaccoist," used one ton the beginning of the season. He could get scarcely any heat. He had to keep his draughts all open to get it to burn then it burned away very rapidly and made a great quantity of ashes and was very dirty and dusty. He says he would willingly pay $1 per ton more for good hard coal. Mrs. Lush "bakeress" used one ton and consumed it in eighteen days in her oven. She then bought a load of good coal and it lasted twenty-eight days, keeping up the same heat. Mr. Miller, leader of the 57th Band, tried it the first part of the winter. He says he could get no heat from it except it was burning rapidly, when it would burn out quickly and complained of it being dirty and dusty and says he would pay $2.00 more per ton for good coal than he would pay for that. Mr. Cox, of Cox & Co., hardware merchants, used some of it in both his furnace and cook stove and consumed from 1 to 1½ more than of hard coal to get the same results. He also complains of it being very dirty. Mr. Butland, "dentist" tried some of it and says the same as the others about it.

They took in quite a lot of it here last season and pushed it hard, but I understand they are not putting in nearly so much of it this season as it is about played out here. They say they rush it hard the first season wherever they go. They are selling for $6.00 here and good hard coal is bringing $6.50. Will write you again on Saturday. Yours affectionately

FRED.

After all this I would not attempt to persuade anyone to not use it as I think they will want to try it anyway. But take my advice and try a ton first. You will know then if you will want more or not. Yours truly,

For some time a system of thieving has been in effect at the electric street car barns, Kingston. The night watchman Orman, and his son have been discovered to be the thieves. Wise Men Know it is folly to build upon a poor foundation, either in architecture in health. A foundation of sand is insecure, and to deaden symptoms by narcotics or nerve compounds is equally dangerous and deceptive. The true way to build up health is to make your blood pure, rich and nourishing by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.
